Centuries after Hans Bernhard settled in New France, 100,000 people in Québec claim German origins. They may be Francophone descendants of mercenaries in the 18th century or Anglophone immigrants of the 1950s. In the 1980s, after a long period of official downplaying of the presence of the Germans, some German-Canadian leaders fought for recognition of the German contribution to a multicultural Canada. Many German-Quebecers took over this discourse, but some refused the idea of a German 'founding people' and insisted on the distinct role of their Francophone society. Furthermore, even in Canada, post-war immigrants had to come to terms with the German past; the victimisation often characterized the German-Canadian press, since readers many, of whom lived in Québec often were expellees of the German 'eastern territories' and the few exiles often chose to stay invisible. Thus for its citizens of German heritage, Québec became the place of encounter of several competing identity discourses, whether it was about the role of Francophones in Canadian history or about the role of Germans.

1801 – St. John's Congregationalist - St. John's Chapel – Québec - First organized in 1801, location unknown, most likely within the walls of the Chapel of the Jesuit Fathers, or the Chapel of the Recollet Fathers or the Chapel of the Ursulines – On Monday June 24th 1816, the Freemasons assisted in laying the corner stone of St. John's Congregational on St. Francis Street, now known as Ferland Street at the corner of Couillard Street, not far from Ste-Famille Street, a small two level stone building was opened the following year - In 1817, Rev. George Spratt was the first pastor and was succeeded in 1821 by Rev. Henry D. Purkis of England and later by Rev. Timothy Atkinson , others who served were: John Parkham, James Drummond, Henry Wilkes - It was originally independent in its constitution, but was for years supplied by a minister from the United States. In 1829, this Congregation resolved to connect themselves with the Church of Scotland. The Presbyterian wing of the congregation under the guidance of Rev. John Clugston would continue until 1854 – A portion of the members of the original church of Saint John's Congregational would continue as a Congregationalist church. In 1848, we find this parish being presided by Rev. J. Drummond - A second Congregational Church would have opened in the city of Québec. The Congregationalists , who for some time also worshipped in the old Haymarket theatre building, built another church at the corner of Palace and McMahon Streets, on the site of an old hotel known as the Mansion House, the headquarters of the Salvation Army in 1919, the corner stone having been laid July 28, 1840. For some years previous to being closed Rev. Mr. Purkis was the pastor of the church - QFHS book #HG-156.9 G3 Historic Tales of Old Quebec - Chalmers Wesley United Québec (1801-1829 St. John's Congregational & 1860-1873 church membership under Quebec Congregational)

1801 – Chalmers Wesley Methodist – Québec - Erected on rue Dauphine, between rue Ste-Anne at rue Ste-Angèle in Old Québec – The following Methodist Ministers most likely served at this congregation from 1800 to 1810, Rev. Samuel Merwin, an American, Thomas Madden, another American, James Mitchell, another American - In 1848, the congregation would move to a larger church building at the corner of Dauphine and St-Stanislas Streets – Rev. J.C. Davidson, Rev. Charles Churchill, presiding in 1848 – Two other sources places the second church on Ste-Angèle Street at the corner of Ste-Anne – It is quite conceivable that the Wesleyan Methodists were operating two small congregations in the late 1790s or early 1800s

1804 or 1806 – Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society of Québec – Québec -Rev. Samuel Merwin, Rev. Nathan Bangs presiding either in 1804 or 1806, visitors from the United States held services in an attic of the Freemason's Hall. A permanent society was formed in 1807 by Rev. Samuel Coates, Rev. John Shea and Rev. Peter Langlois - It was in 1814 that the Rev. Richard Williams instituted the first regular British Wesleyan Mission and in 1818 organized a Missionary Society. It was during Mr. Williams pastoral that the Wesleyan chapel on Ste-Anne Street was opened for public worship on Sunday April 20th 1817 - The church which was found too small for the growing congregation was abandoned and the new church on St-Stanislas Street was dedicated by Rev. Dr. Ritchie on October 7th 1849 - A third Wesleyan Church was opened on October 24th 1830, a small place of worship on Champlain Street, below today's Chateau Frontenac Hotel, it closed soon after on account of rock slides in that vicinity. A fourth Wesleyan Church opened its door in 1839, the centennial year of British Methodism, a chapel or meeting house on Artillery Street, known as Centenary Chapel was opened, it was destroyed in 1845 during a major fire in the city - QFHS books #HG-156.9 G3 Historic Tales of Old Quebec & #HG-150 W6 Untold Tales of Old Quebec - BAnQ films (1831-1930) - Quebec Records (1831-1930) - Ancestry.ca (1831-1930) - Chalmers Wesley United Church Québec (1828-1930 Wesley Methodist and United & 1896-1929 membership Quebec Methodist Circuit)

1810 - St Andrew's Presbyterian Church – Québec - Rev. Dr. Alexander Spark, Rev. Dr. Daniel Wilkie, Rev. John Clugston, Dr. James Harkness, Dr. John Cook presiding from 1784 to 1884 – Rev. Andrew Tannahill Love, Rev. George Cowell, presiding from 1884 to 1925, and from 1926 to 1941, Rev. Dr. Alexander Gordon, presiding – Although the Parish of St. Andrew's was organized about 1789, the new church building opened only on November 30th 1810 on Ste-Anne Street, the church still exists to this day at the same location – The parish was composed in the early to the mid-1800s of comfortable bourgeois Scots. Most Scots of the city were Presbyterians, although some Scots were members of other religious groups. Some of the commercial and administrative members of the Scottish community were Anglicans and a number of Catholic Highlanders settled in British North America. The latter group was especially the case of those who had served in the British Army. The latter and the former were to discover that Canada in comparison with Europe was a haven of religious tolerance – Most Scots prior to 1825 resided in Québec City or Montréal so that Presbyterianism before 1825 remained for the most part an urban phenomenon. – A small plaque near the entrance of the church indicates the years 1759, 1784, 1791, 1810, 1824 as the years the congregation was first established and subsequent church buildings erected or underwent extensive repairs - QFHS books #HG-156.44 S73 St. Andrew's Presbyterian - The Old Gentlemen Stood to Pray & #HG-156.9 G3 Historic Tales of Old Quebec & #HG-150 W6 Untold Tales of Old Quebec - BAnQ films (1770-1869) - Quebec Records (1770-1869) - Ancestry.ca (1770-1869) - Also, contact Chalmers Wesley United Québec:, they might have civil registers among their fonds

1858 - Église Évangélique Baptiste Française de Limoilou - Québec - The formation of the French Evangelical Protestant movement in Québec goes back to 1858, when the Mission de la Grande Ligne would send the Rev. Léon Normandeau. At the said time period, eight families accepted the Christian message, all were baptized in the English Baptist Church - The French Baptist church in Québec was inaugurated on November 19th 1876. The names of Rev. David Marsh and Rev. L. Beaudry are first found among church records. From 1909, a small church was opened in the district of Youville on rue St-Jean and the latter church lasted until about 1930, at which time the land was sold. In 1931 and 1932, the chapel in Limoilou was erected - In 1929, Rev. Émile Boisvert began his ministry in Québec - Civil registers for this parish began on July 26th 1909 and the church is located today at: 1180, 3è Avenue, Québec (Limoilou) - Source: Claude-Kaufholt-Couture - BAnQ book #2559, indexes of civil registers (1909-1996) & Église du Lac-Long - Mission de la Grande Ligne, Rivière Bleue, Au-Pied-du-Lac (indexes of civil registers 1925-1951).
