

The Notaries in Quebec City who were first appointed by the British authorities and later-on during the Lower Canada time period

The 1851 and 1861 censuses

The 1851 and 1861 censuses were the only two decennial censuses conducted in Lower Canada. In 1851, the population of Québec City was 42,052, almost twice the size it had been in 1825. The city continued to grow, reaching 51,109 persons in 1861.

This large increase in population during the 19th century was the combined result of a relative decline in mortality and an increase in the birth rate. Despite continuing immigration, the effect of this growth was to increase the share of the population born in Canada from less than 70% in 1825 to almost 80% in 1861.

Statistics Canada

<http://www.statcan.gc.ca/pub/11-008-x/2008001/article/10574-eng.htm>

The 1861 census indicated that the population of Quebec was nearly 1.2 million, of which 86% were Catholic. Of the total population, 78% was French, 10% was Irish, 6% was English, and 5% was Scottish.

At the time of Confederation, the total population of the British North American colonies was about 3.5 million, of which 75% lived in United Canada (Quebec and Ontario). About 80% of the population of United Canada lived in rural areas.

From 1840 to 1867, despite an exodus of close to 200,000 people to factories in New England, Quebec's population nearly doubled.

Montréal and Québec City were the main urban centres affected by the skyrocketing population. In 1851, the population of Montréal was 57,000; by 1861, it was 90,000. Québec City had a population of 50,000 in 1861.

Québec in 1854

The year 1854 marked an important event in the history of Quebec: the abolition of the seigneurial system, a legacy of the French colonial era which governed land grants and land development in Lower Canada (later Canada East). In the 19th century, the landed bourgeoisie demanded that this system be changed. The government voted to abolish it in 1854 and to indemnify seigneurial landowners.

Though they were not living under this system, the inhabitants of Canada West and the Eastern Townships protested that they would not be paid and succeeded in winning some compensation.
